

HOMEWORK!

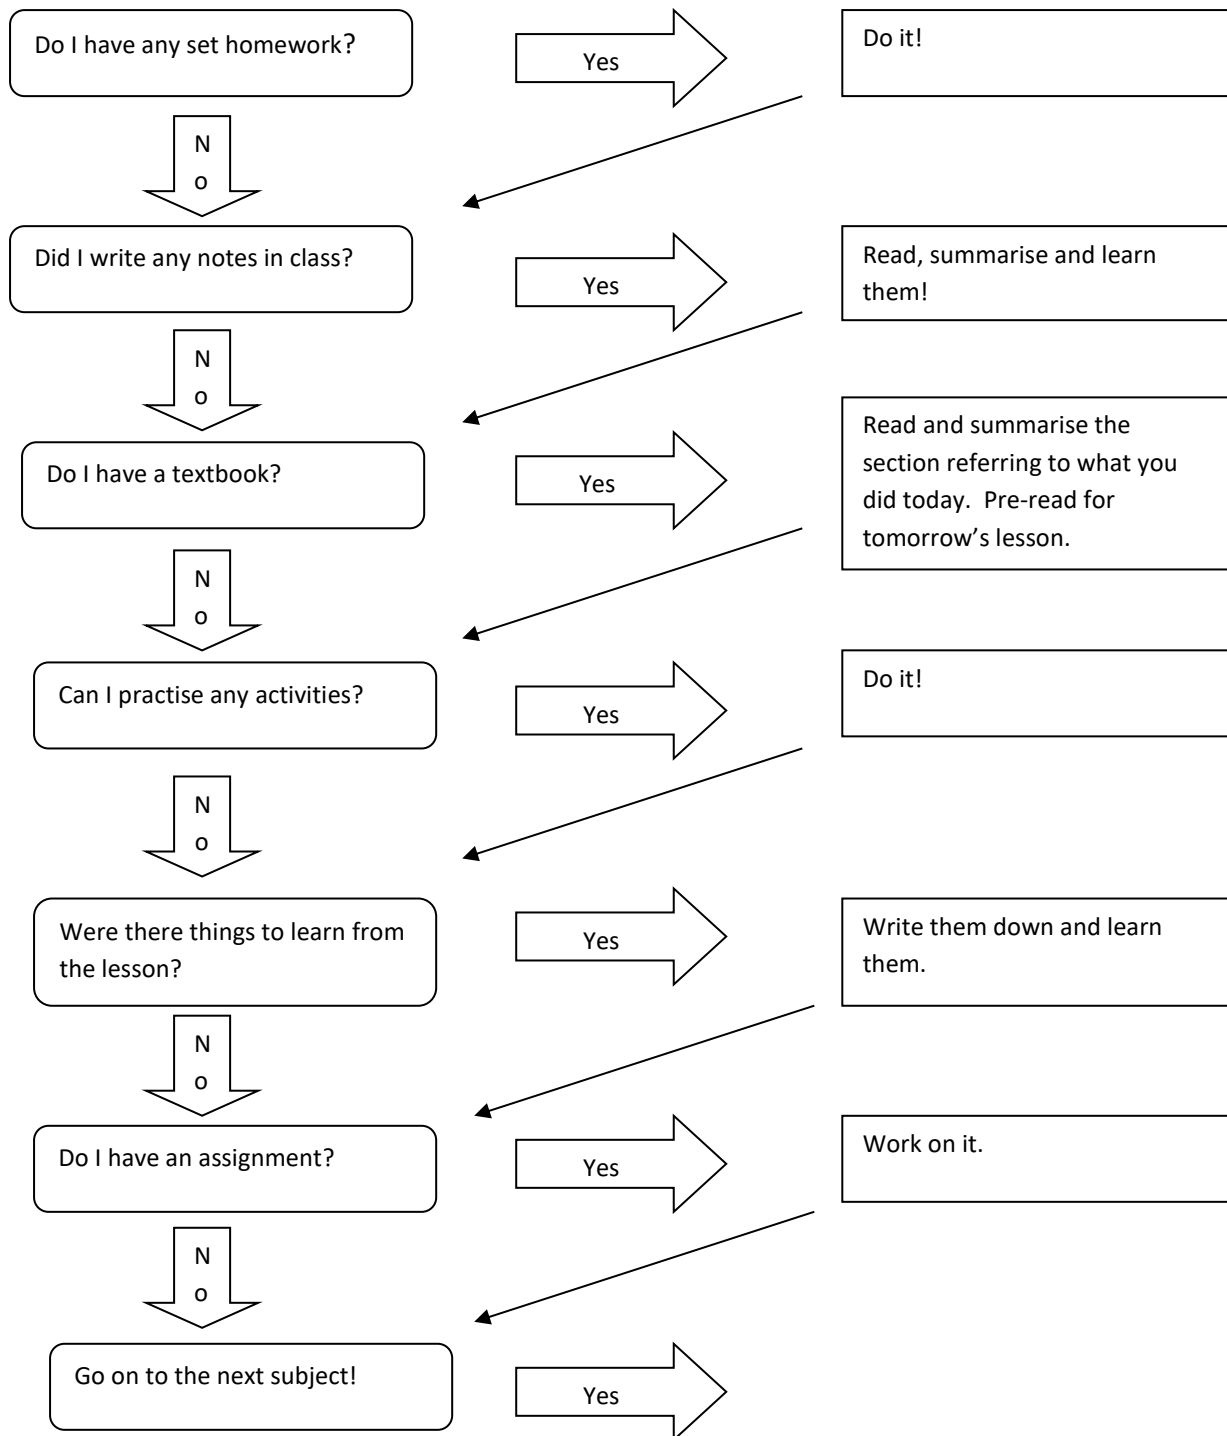

I receive many queries from parents asking:

'What do I do when she says that she does not have any homework?'

The answer is ...

There is no such thing as NO HOMEWORK!

Encourage your daughter to follow this self-questioning strategy to help her manage her workload.
If she follows the flow chart below, she will ALWAYS HAVE HOMEWORK!

Homework is an essential part of the learning process. It provides students with the opportunity to practise, reinforce or apply newly-acquired skills and knowledge and to learn the skills of independent study. It also fosters initiative, responsibility and self-discipline. Parents can support their daughters by ensuring that there is a work space available which is quiet and equipped; setting aside time every day for doing homework; providing guidance and support but not answers; assisting with setting priorities; and praising and rewarding effort and persistence.

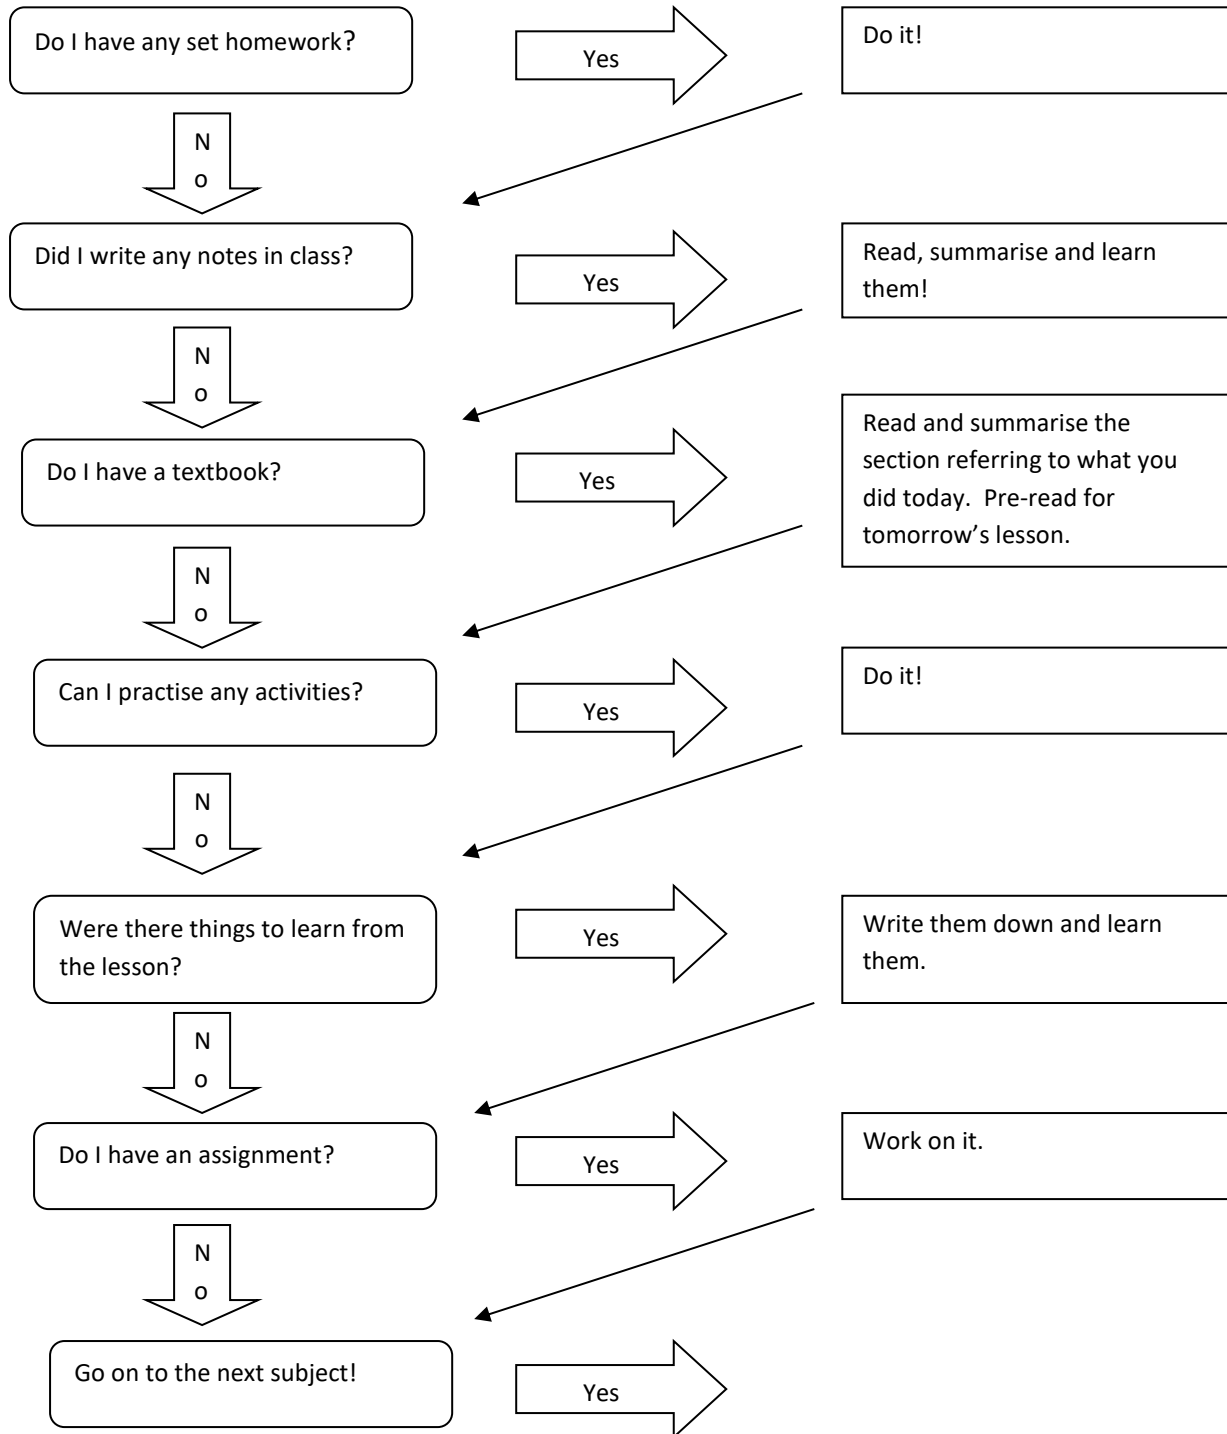

HOMEWORK!

'What do I do when I don't have any set homework?'

The answer is ...

There is no such thing as NO HOMEWORK!

Follow this self-questioning strategy to manage your workload.
If she follows the flow chart below, you will ALWAYS HAVE HOMEWORK!

Homework is an essential part of the learning process. It provides students with the opportunity to practise, reinforce or apply newly-acquired skills and knowledge and to learn the skills of independent study. It also fosters initiative, responsibility and self-discipline. Ensure that there is a work space available which is quiet and equipped; set aside time every day for doing homework; use a study planner; you can ask your family members for guidance and support but not answers; you can also ask them for help with setting priorities. Try using goals sheet to tick off each one as you complete your work.
